Rewrite the future

A photograph of a classroom full of students. In the foreground, a girl with long brown hair looks off to the side. To her right, a boy in a white shirt and a green and yellow striped tie looks forward. In the background, another student has their hand raised. The word "INEQUALITY" is written in large white capital letters across the middle of the image, with a blue diagonal line striking through the "I".

Welcome

How we show up matters. Being consistent in the way we speak and look, and in how we carry ourselves, is what makes our brand recognisable and trusted.

That means using, the right logo, the right type, the right colours and making sure our strapline 'Rewrite the future' always lands with clarity and care.

Because every poster, post or pitch is a reflection of what we stand for. And what we stand for matters.

This toolkit has all you need to create on-brand, engaging communications that will drive our message home.

Our rallying cry

'Rewrite the future' is our rallying cry. It's an urgent call to action – to change the story for the child, the school, the system.

With 'Rewrite the future', we're inviting everyone (teachers, partners, policymakers) to join our movement and challenge educational inequality.

It recognises that too many are held back by systems and circumstances they didn't choose. But that doesn't mean their story is over before it's begun.

'Rewrite the future' reminds us that change is possible.

And for those who can help make that change happen, it challenges and inspires.

It reframes teaching as one of the most powerful things a person can do. It tells teachers they're not just educators, they're Change Makers. It reminds policymakers, funders and partners that progress is possible and they have a role to play in it.

This isn't just a line. It's an invitation. To believe in potential. To fight inequality. To drive change. To give every child the future they deserve.

Our story

A child's future should be full of promise and possibilities.

For a child growing up in poverty, all too often their future is already written. More likely to fall behind in school. More likely to leave without the grades they need. And more likely to remain in poverty for the rest of their lives.

Education can flip the script – creating opportunities and bringing hope.

As a leading education charity, for over twenty years Teach First has been training teachers and leaders, supporting schools and speaking out. Giving children in the most deprived communities a fighting chance at a successful future.

Yet millions are still being denied opportunities by poverty and inequality.

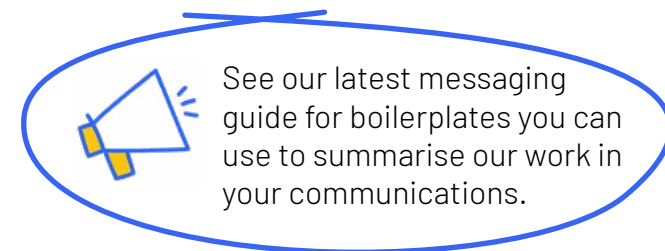

We are building a movement of Change Makers and Change Partners. United in the belief that no child's educational success should be limited by their socio-economic background.

Our Change Makers start by leading change in the classroom and, wherever their career takes them, they continue to champion children's futures. And our Change Partners help us reach more pupils facing educational disadvantage than ever before.

Together, we are making sure every child, no matter their background, gets the opportunities they need to thrive.

Change is possible.

It's time to rewrite the future.

Our voice

Whenever and whatever we write, our language should reflect the three elements of our brand tone of voice. When you've written something, check it back. Does it reflect these?

Check our updated messaging guide for some tips on how to apply these tone of voice elements to your work.

POSITIVE

Others won't believe in what we can do unless we believe it ourselves. That's why we're positive and upbeat when we speak about Teach First.

Everything we say should be confident, infused with defiant belief and hope for the future that can be rewritten.

EMPOWERING

We are mobilising a movement to end educational inequality. We need every person to believe they can make a difference. Our words should encourage, motivate and inspire.

Everyone has a role to play, so we need to be inclusive, warm and welcoming.

PURPOSEFUL

Our mission is clear: end educational inequality. So, our words should be too. We get to the point and are intentional in how we talk about our work. All our communications should be purpose-driven - never wasted.

We inform, challenge and aren't afraid to say what needs to be said.

Our logo and strapline

The main Teach First logo should be used on all of our communications.

There are landscape and portrait versions of the logo so the best version can be selected to fit different applications.

Similarly, there are different versions of our strapline graphic.

Use the strapline graphic wherever you can but particularly on any external communications with key external audiences.

Always follow our guidance on using the two together.

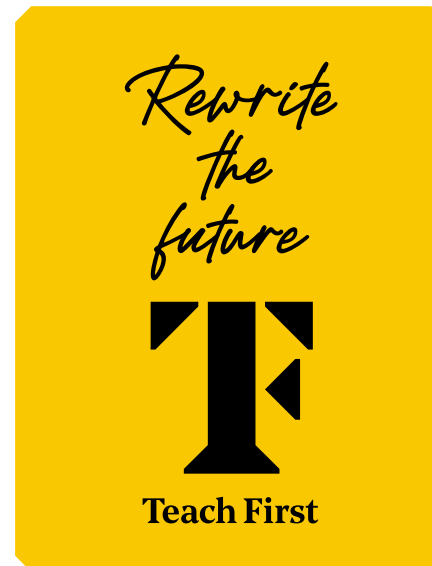

LOGO

LOGO AND STRAPLINE

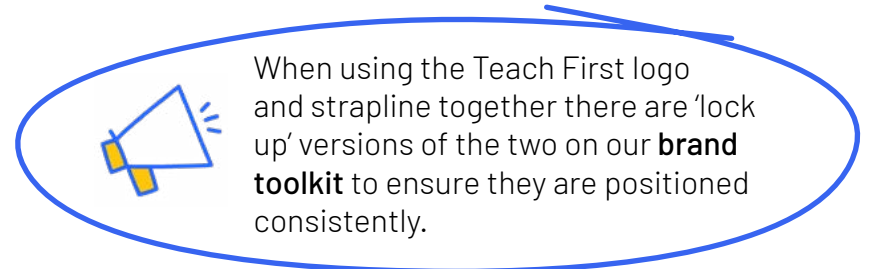

On a dark background each should be white.

On a yellow background each should be black.

On a white background use the blue version.

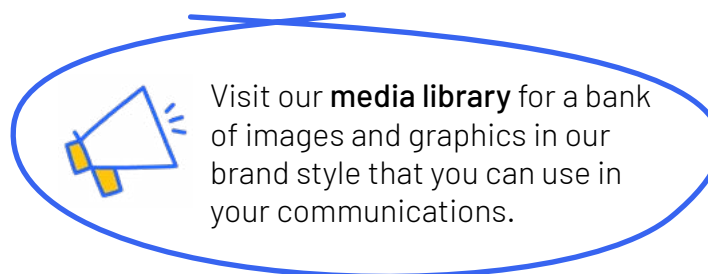

Photography

Our photography and film approach is dynamic, modern and alive – a clear break from the category norm.

We don't observe from a distance. We connect, directly. Children should feel central and seen, often looking straight into the lens. We shoot at their level and within the action, not outside it.

The visuals should reflect the full diversity of UK school life, across age, background and ability. And where our Teach First teachers – our Change Makers – appear, they're not positioned as outsiders or authority figures.

They are part of the scene, embedded in the moment, amongst the children, never apart from them. Every frame should feel like the future is in motion.

Colours

Our primary colour palette consists of four base colours.

The core Teach First colours are a vibrant blue and a sunny yellow. These colours are supported by a bold black which helps give impact to our hard-hitting messaging. Combined with white, these colours create a flexible and accessible brand palette.

RGB colours are for digital use and CMYK and Pantone colours are to be used when printing material.

Markings

Our markings are about communicating positive transformation.

They are expressive, handwritten-style illustrations that bring clarity, emphasis and human energy to our words and images.

Inspired by the marks teachers make — circles, underlines, arrows, strikethroughs — these elements can highlight key stats, shift the meaning of a word, or draw the viewer's attention to something that matters.

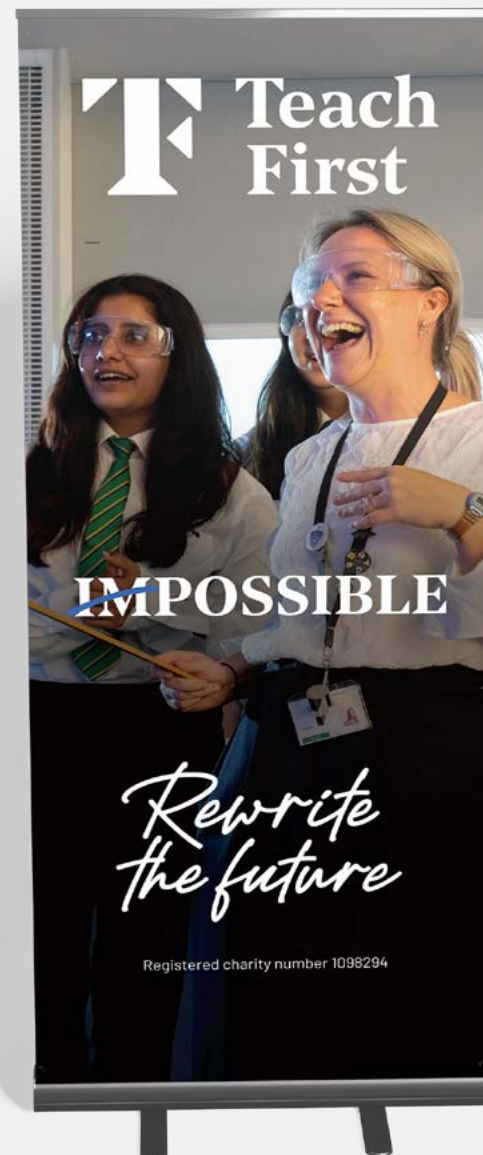

Never try to recreate the markings style yourself, always work with the marketing team to produce the powerful graphics you need.

They should always feel purposeful. Whether used to amplify a message or visually 'rewrite' an idea, our markings are there to sharpen the story. Use with intent, and ensure the mark supports the communication.
